

What is Philadelphia LawWorks?

Philadelphia LawWorks¹ matches eligible homeowners, non-profit organizations, community groups and small businesses with attorneys who provide free (pro bono) legal services and education. This is the application for small businesses. If you are a community group or non-profit organization, please fill out our “Non-Profit Organization Application for Pro Bono Legal Assistance.”

What services does Philadelphia LawWorks provide?

LawWorks volunteers are able to assist on issues including, but not limited to: incorporation, contracts, real estate, tax, intellectual property and employment.

Note: While all legal services are free, clients are responsible for paying filing fees and any other out-of-pocket costs.

Who is eligible for Philadelphia LawWorks legal services?

Small business owners and microentrepreneurs are eligible for free legal assistance if the business is located in Philadelphia and he or she meets our eligibility guidelines, including income eligibility. For this reason, please disclose your income at the appropriate place on the application and include tax returns for the two most recent years.

Note: LawWorks does not provide assistance to small businesses for collection cases.

What happens after I submit my application to Philadelphia LawWorks?

Philadelphia LawWorks will review your application to determine what your legal needs are and if you meet the eligibility requirements. If your organization is eligible for assistance, we will attempt to refer your case to a volunteer attorney.
